Finbar is the only one who knows that this is no ordinary child, but a child from the realm of the Faeries. Brendan is adopted and grows up like a typical child. By the time he is a teenager he has the same problems most teenagers have. He wears braces, his skin breaks out continually, and he is so clumsy he is constantly tripping or bumping into things. He is, however, very lucky to have a really cool friend named Kim. He has no idea why she would want to hang out with a geek like him. She is as hard as nails and protects him from the bullies at school who are constantly on his case.

Then one day a very strange thing happens. He begins to understand the squirrels. He hears them talking to one another. He thinks he must be going crazy. But then he learns the truth. He is a Faerie who is lost in the human world. Once he knows who he is, the human disguise that has been protecting him begins to fade. Soon, those from his world who are intent to use his many powers for evil are after him.

Brendan has a big choice to make. Will he stay in the world of the humans or the world of Faeries? The one and only thing that can protect him and the human world from the evil that is after him is the pendant that was stolen from him when he was a baby. The evil creatures from the world of the Faeries are after him. Can he find the pendant before it is too late?
